NEW DELHI

HOSPITAL chain Max Healthcare said its four new hospitals, which would add another 1,200 beds to its total capacity, would start operations by 2011.

The four new hospitals, in which the company is investing Rs 480 crore, are coming up in Delhi, Dehradun, Mohali and Bhatinda.

"The four upcoming hospitals would be functional by April 2011. With this achievement our capacity of beds would increase to 2,000 from existing 800 beds," Max Healthcare chief executive officer and MD Pervez Ahmed said.

The hospital chain currently operates eight facilities in the Delhi NCR region.
